South River Technologies' WebDrive Provides PC Access to iDisk Storage Accounts

WebDrive Empowers iDisk Solution on Windows Desktop

Annapolis, MD – December 15, 2005 – South River Technologies® (SRT) announced today their WebDrive® FTP Client is certified to work with the Apple® .Mac iDisk® online storage service. WebDrive allows users, through a mapped drive letter, to securely access, edit and share remote files as if they were on their local computer.

Apple's iDisk online storage service allows users to store, share, transfer and back up important files. Using WebDrive to connect to their iDisk enables users to access files and folders through a virtual drive while working on a Windows platform. Accessing iDisk files with WebDrive is as easy as accessing files stored on the local PC.

WebDrive can be used to connect to other online storage services and web servers in addition to the iDisk service. Users can drag and drop files between iDisk and other storage accounts. In addition, WebDrive's new streaming feature can play A/V files straight from iDisk. Simply open a music or movie file stored on iDisk and the file streams to the PC's designated media player.

“For users who switch between a Mac and a PC environment, WebDrive is an ideal solution for .Mac iDisk connectivity from Windows,” says John Glavin, VP of Engineering for SRT. “WebDrive creates the ease-of-use in Windows that Mac users are accustomed to in the Mac environment.”
