South River Technologies Adds Box and OneDrive Integrations to New WebDrive for Mac

In Reaction to User Demand for Access to Box and Microsoft OneDrive, WebDrive 4.0 Includes New Cloud Storage Integrations

ANNAPOLIS, MD--(Marketwired - Nov 12, 2014) - South River Technologies, Inc. (SRT), an innovator in secure file transfer, has released v4.0 of WebDrive for Apple Mac users, introducing new integrations with Microsoft OneDrive and Box.net's cloud service.

The new Mac version is compatible with Apple's new OS, Yosemite, and includes localized releases in French, German, Japanese and Spanish.

WebDrive for Mac mounts remote servers and cloud services as a local device. It brings secure cloud access to users' desktops, with as much simplicity as a USB drive. Users can open, access, edit and save remote files as if they were on their desktop and can save directly to the cloud from within any application.

Alongside the new additions of OneDrive and Box, WebDrive integrates with popular cloud storage services including Amazon S3, Dropbox and GoogleDrive. WebDrive also works with corporate SharePoint, FTP and WebDAV servers, enabling integrated connections to files in a variety of cloud or on-premise server locations.

"The competition and business demand for cloud storage services continues at breakneck speed," said Michael Ryan, CEO of South River Technologies. "We have a vocal WebDrive user community among our five million installed seats from which we gather feedback for new versions and integrations. Mac integration to Box has been a growing demand, but OneDrive integration requests have really peaked. Introducing these new integrations is part of our mission to ensure users can connect to their files -- wherever they are stored -- in the simplest and most secure way possible."

WebDrive for Mac 4.0 is available immediately at \$39.95 for a single license and as low as \$12 per seat for large corporate licenses.
